Yale-New Haven Hospital Pediatric Oncology/Respiratory and Transplant Unit

Representing a total of 17 beds, the "sister" Pediatric Oncology/Respiratory and Transplant Unit provides unique and specialized services within Yale-New Haven Children's Hospital.

On this unit, our nurses most commonly care for patients whose diagnoses include cancer, respiratory failure or airway compromise requiring tracheotomy and/or ventilation, as well as the care of transplant patients.

Wonderful Learning Opportunities

- Customized competency-based orientation
- Become an expert in the care of children with cancer while becoming chemotherapy/biotherapy certified
- Increase your knowledge of specialized skills, including: tracheotomy tubes and ventilators; central venous access devices; chemotherapy administration; following protocols and participating in research studies; and more
- Learn to educate patients and families on their disease process, self-care guidelines, how to give medications and injections, change tracheotomy tubes and ties, etc.
- RCAP (Recognition and Clinical Advancement Program)
- Participate in study groups while being encouraged to sit for national certification programs
- Attend local and national conferences pertaining to our patient populations

Unit-Based Councils/Programs

- Practice Council: Addressing clinical practice and day-to-day operations of the unit.
- Peer Review: Unit staff reviewing peer performance of both their job description and key behaviors. Feedback from peers is provided at the employee's annual review.
- Unit Standards Program: Staff from the units set unit norms, professional accountabilities, and unit orientation structure.
- Patient Satisfaction/Staff Recognition Program: Staff from the units look at current satisfaction scores, unit welcome and family orientation, ways to recognize and reward staff, and more!
- "Fun Police": Staff on the unit are responsible for setting up fun activities both on the unit and outside of work.
